BIOGRAPHICAL NOTE

Rose Hoadley McIlveen (1930-2016) was born on April 1, 1930 to Albert V. McIlveen, a stone carver, and Mary Neal McIlveen, a member of the Hoadley family. Rose received a bachelor's degree in English Literature and a Masters of Education from Indiana University. Rose also attended University College, of the University of London, completing postdoctoral work in English and American History. Rose worked for the Louisville Courier Journal as a reporter, and was a writer for the IU News Bureau in Bloomington. Rose dedicated most of her time to pursuing her interests in history and genealogy. As well as being an avid researcher of her family's genealogy, especially the Hoadley Family, Rose was interested in the history of Bloomington and Monroe County, and was the author of "Looking Back', a weekly column in the Herald Times, from 1979-1989. Rose also had an interest in literature, and attempted to publish three different manuscripts focusing on the Regency period. Rose was an active member of the Bloomington community, being a member of the Monroe Historical Society, Meals on Wheels, and the Founding Board, and serving as Alumnae Advisor, Alpha Omicaron Pi Women's Fraternity. Rose also served as the president of the Bloomington Hospital Auxiliary, and as a board member of the American Red Cross, Monroe County Chapter. She died in Bloomington, January 13, 2016.
